

The "Gazette's" Idea.

The Carson APPEAL says the office seekers in this State hang on to the public tent as long as they can and send their salary regularly to California while they are living off the people of this State, to improve property in that State, and when finally when he gets out of the public trace, he packs his grip and follows his money. The APPEAL says:

"Show us an office holder who is not investing a dollar in this State but is sending it all away, and we are ready to bet even money that he is good for at least two more terms."

All of which is true, and it is only necessary to call attention to a few cases to convince the people of the truthfulness of the statement. First on the list comes the Hon. John P. Jones, who is still representing the State in the U. S. Senate, but whose residence has been at Santa Monica for the past twelve years, next is ex Governor H. G. Blasdel, who skipped out as soon as his term expired; then comes Kinkaid, who has gone; Hallock, whose term of Controller expired last January, immediately took up his residence in San Francisco; Bicknell, Clerk of the Supreme Court for sixteen years, has gone to Los Angeles; Dornier Nevada's Secretary of State, for eight years, went to Stockton even before his term expired; Judge Leonard has gone to Utah after making a failure of life in California; Judge Beatty, who the people honored with a place on the bench for nearly twenty years did not lose a day in getting to Sacramento after a combination of circumstances made it impossible for him to get in again. Ex-Controller Hobart has been gone many years; ex-Surveyor General Preble lost no time in getting out when his term expired, and he was speedily followed by School Superintendent C. S. Young, and so it goes through the whole list of Nevada's State officers.—Reno Gazette.

In some States a man who goes before a convention must show he already has an interest in the country and owns some realty. But in Nevada he has only to show that he wants the office.

FAYLOR'S "FIZZLE."

The California papers are pronouncing Faylor's suit for a fizzle. That is where they show their dense ignorance.

Faylor has been "seen" handsomely, and his suit was not a fizzle; he got all he was after.

Some years ago Pete Burke sued some gentlemen in Eureka for services in bribing members of the Legislature to vote for a R. R. franchise. People said the suit was a fizzle, but it wasn't, as the parties "came to the front."

A most interesting census bulletin is that which shows that the United States has only 97,265 paupers, one to each 643 inhabitants, while Great Britain, the home of free trade has, 990,155, or one to every 38 inhabitants. This furnishes a striking object lesson of the effects of free trade and of protection, as national policies. It would be still more striking on the side of protection if the facts were shown, as it no doubt exists, that a very considerable percentage of the paupers came from European countries previous to the incoming of the present administration, which has by its vigilance and the aid of a Republican Congress, which amended our immigration laws, reduced the landing of pauper immigrants upon our shores to a minimum.

Gen. Dickinson was asked to take a glass of wine at a banquet in Santa Cruz, and in the presence of lady guests responded contemptuously: "No; I don't want any of that stuff. It is only fit for abandoned women and millionaires; give me whiskey." Dickinson ought to be kicked out of the service, but the chances are that he will not be.
